This training offers an opportunity to learn the foundations of early developmental milestones for infants. There are “windows of opportunity” for the healthy growth of the five senses including sight, hearing, taste, touch and smell. When providers are aware of the early development of these senses, it gives meaning to why we need to wrap our babies in blankets, hold, rock, sing to, talk with and be responsive to them. After all, we now know through research that their brain development starts before they are even born.
